TCP uses sequence numbers and acknowledgements to provide reliable delivery.

A sender retransmits data when an acknowledgement does not arrive.

UDP is connectionless and does not guarantee packet delivery.